

Reduce Errors: Automate Time Tracking With Field Service Solutions

Your team is doing their best to keep up with time cards, but if they round up to the nearest hour or half-hour, those costs add up. And rounding errors are only one issue you face – forgotten, illegible or lost time cards create more challenges and more missed profit. Unfortunately, accounting for the cost of the errors isn't where it ends. The administrative time spent correcting mistakes contributes to overtime and overspending.

You don't have to let errors overrun your budget. You can eliminate time cards – and the inconvenience and inaccuracy that go with them – with solutions that automate the process.

Increase accuracy

The mobile timekeeping feature of a fleet management solution allows drivers to clock in and out digitally so you get GPS-verified, minute-by-minute accuracy. Handwritten reports, which are prone to errors or just getting lost, are no longer necessary since hours worked are automatically logged. And, as an added benefit, multiple drivers can use the same vehicle, so your resources are maximized.

Reduce administrative time

Minimize the time spent on administrative tasks by combining fleet management's automatic mobile time tracking with customizable mobile forms. Without hard copies or handwritten time cards to keep up with, you'll save time hunting down documents and fixing inaccuracies. And when mobile forms are submitted on-site to deliver quotes or complete transactions, a time stamp is captured automatically – helping to further validate time spent on the job while streamlining business processes.

Roofing Field Service Company Saves Thousands

By using a field service management solution to minimize time-tracking errors and decrease administrative work, companies can reduce costs and maximize labor dollars and profits.

The president of Hasheider Roofing & Siding Ltd. saw surprising improvements and experienced these benefits firsthand after implementing his own field service management solution. "I ran the numbers, and it sounds ridiculous, but I figured out that if each [one of my 25 guys] is off on his time reporting by only 10 minutes per day, that's costing us $100,000 per year," he said. With the ability to track time automatically and confirm accuracy down to the minute, he is now able to save his company thousands, making a positive impact on profitability.

Field service solutions from U.S. Cellular® can help you reclaim lost time – and profit – quickly and accurately. Find out how the mobile timekeeping feature of fleet management and the time-stamping feature of mobile forms can help. Call 1-866-616-5587 or visit uscellular.com/business/contact to learn more.